In the supreme effort which the French and Spaniards combined, supported by a fleet of fire-ships, made to become masters of the fortress, which was defeated, it covered itself with glory which can never be eclipsed. Very properly at the close of this courageous resistance General, Elliot was created Lord Heathfield, and other honours were showered upon the defenders. To this day the British regiments which served through the siege bear on their colours the arms of Gibraltar, the "castle and key," with the motto "Montis insignia Calpe;" while inumerable shot-marks are still to be seen. like honourable scars, upon many of the old buildings and fortifications, notably at the Moorish eastle at the north end of the town: -Picturesque Europe.

A PARLIAMENTARY RECORD. It should be a great consolation to the parliamentary candidates who are going to be beaten, to know that very eminent statesmen have frequently been in the same predicament. Mr. Gladstone has represented five constituencies; Mr. Disraeli contested three before he found a seat. And then look at Mr. Bernal Osborne's record, for instance. He fought terr contested el-ctions-namely Wycombe once, Middlesex twice, Dover twice; Nottingham twice, and Waterford three times; and he also sat for Liskcard. Mr. Osborue's memoirs, having only been printed for private circulation, are but little known. His stormy public life, being a history of the hustings during the lastforty years, may have some interest at the present moment. In 1841 he suddenly set off from his DAVID CORSAR'& SONS' Landon club in search of a little place called Wycombe, which he heard was requiring a member. He found it, stood on independent principles, and was back again in London. -duly elected, before the clubs had ceased to wonder at his audacity in "thinking he could best Carlingford." By the next election Wycombe fancied if would like a change; and for a moment .Osborne-who was a true cosmopolitan-meditated running across to Ireland and standing for Tipperary county, Then he observed that there was a vacancy HE Undersigned having been appointed for an independent caudidate nearer home. in the county of Middlesex, and he flung bimself into the contest with such pluck and giee that there was no resisting him. He was elected member for Middlesex. Irish politics were now his hobby. What was required in Ireland, he said, was social reform rather than political. "It was the bounden duty of the House to adopt such a measure as would create a race of small proprietors in Ireland." As for the Irish Church, "he did not wish to see it abblished, but to have We congregational and not the territorial plan adopted." Speaking on this subject, be told a story that was remembered against him long afterwards when he stood for an Trish constituency. He knew, he informed the House, of an Irish parish where there was a church and only one Protestant family, When the rector once took it into his head to go and preach there, he found a goose hatching ber eggs in the pulpit!
